

Mayor

Adolfo Carrión, Jr. (I)

My parents came to New York from Puerto Rico because they believed in the promise of our great city. But for too many of us, New York is becoming too expensive. It's still not providing our young people the education they need to succeed and it's not the center of innovation and the magnet for jobs it once was. I'm running for Mayor to restore the promise of New York for everyone in all five boroughs. I'm running to make this Your City again. We need Independent leadership that's not controlled by political parties or a few interests that prevent all of us from making New York a better place to live, work and raise a family. I've been a Teacher, City Council Member, Borough President, White House official under President Obama and a small businessman. My experience has shown me that government can do better. It can use common sense as a guide and it can be more innovative and effective.

Our New York — Your City — is a place where parents and students have more power than union bosses. It's a place that helps businesses grow instead of putting up roadblocks to their success in the form of high taxes, fees and fines. Your New York is a safe New York, where cops walk the beat again and have a stronger relationship with our neighborhoods. It's a smarter city; a 21st Century city that uses technology to make our lives easier. and it's a city that respects the taxpayer. I pledge not to raise taxes on our hard working families. I'm running for Mayor because I believe in a New York that helps you explore the limits of what you can be — a place where the promise of a better life — like the one my parents worked hard to achieve — can be kept for everyone. You are powerful. Your voice is needed in this election. I want to be your Mayor and I'm asking for your support — and your vote.
